

Instructions and rules:

Sunmin Kim sociologist in his 2019 paper (Rethinking models of minority participation) which was published in the Du Bois Review: Social Science Research on Race (Cambridge University Press) took inspiration from theoretical principles of relational sociology, he developed a relational model of political participation by identifying four different types of political styles. These survey-based models of minority political participation are revealed after the game is finished and players can understand which political style they would represent if they belonged to a minority group.

Tips for facilitators:

The game is a simple activity. Be sure to read instructions carefully and put on a table all the items of the game before starting. Have a look at the puzzles of the world maps.

04

Instructions and rules:

- Game is played individually or in groups.
- Put 2 decks (1.General Knowledge Cards deck, Situations Card deck) of playing cards upside down on the table in accordance with the colors.
- Put world maps puzzles in 2 groups in accordance with the colors.
- Put cards with the situations separately on the table.
- Put the Situation answer sheet on the table to take notes after answering each situation card. Make note by using green stickers. Players shall think as a thes were members of an ethnic minority group when answering the situation card.
- Take a figure representing you or your group on the football field at the starting point.
- One of the players should pick a card from one of the 2 decks and ask the question to the competing person or a group. Correct answer is bolded on the card. If the answer is correct the player on the field moves forward.
- Regardless of whether the question is answered correctly, the turn for asking the next question goes to the competing player.
- After answering every second question correctly, the player gets one question from the deck of Situations Cards.
- The player gets the first piece of the puzzle after scoring the first goal.
- To be the winner, the player should collect all 4 pieces of the same puzzle.
- Put aside incorrectly answered cards to use them in case of answering all the cards of both decks. Put incorrectly answered cards in accordance with colors.
